The land of tinsel and glitter hasn't always shone as brightly as it does today. For most people, Hollywood is synonymous with movies, glamour, and fast living. <A>

Horace Wilcox, the leader of the Temperance Society, was one of the early developers of the area; in fact, his wife gave Hollywood its name. After acquiring the land for the community in 1887, Wilcox established an orchard, built homes and churches, and planned for parks and libraries. Intending the village to be a model community, Wilcox and the Society declared that only those who abstained from alcohol could settle there.

Hollywood existed as its founders intended for over 20 years. In 1900 there were fewer than 500 residents. Besides the practice of not drinking alcohol, no one carried firearms and there was no jail, as crime was practically nonexistent. <C>

But this quiet and bliss were fated to end. In 1910 the residents voted to join with the city of Los Angeles in order to gain access to the city's water supply. The following year, the first motion picture studio was established, and from then on the industry grew rapidly. Hollywood today is universally considered the movie capital of the world.
